Camp Sunshine Awards 29 Campers with Sunshine Scholarships

The 2017 Camp Sunshine scholarship recipients are planning to become doctors, nurses, a dietician, and even a pilot. They are choosing different careers with the same goal: giving back and helping others. These former campers are grateful for all they've received, and they all hold a special place in their hearts for Camp Sunshine.

Established in 1992, these scholarships are awarded to Camp Sunshine Alumni who plan to attend a college, university or technical school. Camp Sunshine has awarded college scholarships to 29 very deserving childhood cancer survivors this year and they will be attending a variety of institutions – both near and far.

Providing these scholarships – thanks to generous donations – is a way for Camp Sunshine to continue to support these future leaders on their journey, and a wonderful way to stay connected to them as they move forward in life.

Each applicant must submit an essay when applying for the scholarship. Here are some excerpts from some of this year's inspiring scholarship recipients.

Collier Cayce, Georgia Southern University Having cancer opened my eyes to a whole new world and the fact that there are so many kids who are fighting this nasty disease. Battling and surviving a rare form of cancer molded me into the stronger, better and more optimistic person I am today. I have met lifelong friends that I talk to on a daily basis through Camp Sunshine. As I look for a way to give back, one of my goals is to become a Leader in Training and then become a counselor. I hope to be part of Camp Sunshine for years to come.

Grace Lawton Davis, Agnes Scott College In crucial ways, the light and joy of Camp Sunshine helped me grow into the soon to be college student I am today. I created memories and friendships that I will never forget. At Camp Sunshine, I could do all the activities that the other kids could do even though I am in a wheelchair. The people at camp could look beyond my disability and see me as a young girl who wanted to make new friends and enjoy similar experiences even though I had to do things a little differently.

I enjoy speaking about disabilities at school and being a part of a diverse and inclusive community. But I want to do more, help more kids and help the world see the survivors and the disabled as more than what we've suffered, but as capable and caring people. Many people gave their all for me; now it's my turn.

Madeleine Dreesman, University of Georgia Thanks to Camp Sunshine, I have friends for life.

This summer was my last time as a camper, but I plan to return as a counselor in training as soon as I can. At UGA, I will major in physics with plans to go to medical school. My experience with childhood cancer has impacted that decision. I saw a whole new world: hospitals, emergency rooms, ICUs and radiation centers. I experienced firsthand different medical specialties, learned what they did and how each one helps their patients. I hope to become a pediatric anesthesiologist because of those who helped me feel comfortable during a very scary time in my ten-year-old life.

A few years back, the English soul singer Heather Small released a song called "Proud." One of the signature lines was "What have you done today to make you feel proud?" The song perfectly captures the essence of looking back, facing forward and sharing in a good feeling.

Pride – the humble, happy version, not the boastful kind – is rooted in past accomplishment. Yet it's also powerfully motivating, calling us to step up and work hard to achieve something big in the future.

And a moment of pride is experienced purely in the present. It's sharing in the warm happiness of others because of what they've done.

This issue of Postcards highlights four good reasons that I am proud of Camp Sunshine and all that we have accomplished.

Reason no. 1: Our scholarship winners. There are 29 of them this year, all former campers who persevered in school and life, and who now have their sights set on college. In their stories, you'll see how Camp Sunshine inspired them to give back. (You'll also feel good about the future leaders of our country.)

Reason no. 2: Wendy's. They're so much more than burgers and fries. They're a generous community partner – especially the Wendy's franchisee groups throughout Georgia, who have been our steadfast supporters. Their Jr. Frosty promotions alone have generated hundreds of thousands of dollars to benefit our camp and campers.

Reason no. 3: Good people like Geoff Jackman. For two decades, Geoff has given his talent and time to Camp Sunshine, which is why he's in the Volunteer Spotlight this month. He is also one of the many volunteers who travel to camp from outside the state to help out.

Reason no. 4: Dorothy Jordan. We're thriving today because of her vision 35 years ago to create Camp Sunshine. Today, Dorothy is still on our board and still volunteers. You'll get a chance to thank her – and share in the pride of Camp Sunshine's success – if you come to our February celebration of the camp's 35th anniversary.

So: What makes you most proud of Camp Sunshine? I would love to hear – email me at sally@mycampsunshine.com, and we'll share your good thoughts and those of others on social media.

Most of all – thank you for helping to build and continue a legacy of love for children with cancer. You make us proud.

– Sally Hale, Executive Director

VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

Geoff Jackman: Traveling Across the Country for Camp Sunshine

Each summer, Camp Sunshine is fortunate to have hundreds of volunteers – many who come back year after year – give their time during Teen Week and Junior Week. They travel to camp from near and far, no matter where they call home. This summer, volunteers came from 18 different states. Dr. Geoff Jackman is one of those committed volunteers.

The doctor, who goes by “Jackman” to all who know him at camp, uses words like “fate” and “luck” when describing how he got involved with Camp Sunshine 20 years ago.

At the time he had just completed his residency in pediatric emergency medicine at a children’s hospital in Dallas, and had come to Atlanta to do a fellowship at what was then known as Henrietta Egleston Children’s Hospital (now part of Children’s Healthcare of Atlanta). He moved into a house with three other people, all whom volunteered at Camp Sunshine. They encouraged him to join them that summer.

That was in 1998, and Jackman hasn’t missed a Teen Week at Camp Sunshine since, despite the fact that he only lived in Atlanta for three years before taking a job in Salt Lake City, Utah. He says it was never in question that he would make the trip back to Atlanta every summer for that one special week.

“I can never give as much to Camp Sunshine as what it gives back,” he says. “The week I spend at camp puts me in a good frame of mind. To see what the kids can accomplish just makes it all worthwhile.”

Although he is a doctor, he doesn’t volunteer in that capacity. Instead, he has served as a cabin counselor to 16, 17 and 18-year-old boys each summer. He has been coming so long that he has had the privilege to watch many of the campers grow up.

“Kids that were in my cabin are now counselors, and some are married with kids of their own,” he says. “It has been great to see these kids grow, and grow up.”

One of his favorite memories is of a young girl doing the ropes course for the first time, without the use of her prosthetic leg. This caused her to be late for lunch. When she entered the dining hall, the entire place erupted in cheers and gave her a standing ovation.

“To me, that just speaks volumes about the camp,” says Jackman. “Something like that puts your whole life in perspective.”

This past summer Jackman and his wife moved to Southern California where he took a position at Rady Children’s Hospital in San Diego. But he plans to continue to make the cross country trek to Camp Sunshine.

“Camp Sunshine is like a family,” he says, “and once you’re part of it, that never changes. It’s a unique bond where everyone wishes each other success both inside and outside of camp. I am grateful to be a part of it.”*✳

Kayla Watt, University of North Georgia If I had not gone to Camp

Sunshine, then I would be a completely different person. With the support of my nurses, doctors, family and friends, I progress every day both mentally and physically. Ever since I was a little girl, I always wanted to be in the medical field working with kids. I truly do not see myself doing anything else in the future but working at Children's Healthcare of Atlanta Egleston. When I was in the hospital, I always felt so alone because no other kid had the cancer and the surgery I had, and I know in my heart when I become a nurse there is going to be a kid around the age of eleven who unfortunately will be going through what I went through, and is going to feel alone. And I will be their nurse and share all my experiences and advice with them.

John Palmer Moise, Brown University

I was diagnosed with Acute B-cell Lymphoblastic Leukemia in November 2000, when I was two years old. Because my treatment spanned most of my childhood, my experience had a profound impact on my outlook on life, and gave me an appreciation for life and a strong desire to help others in the very same way that I was helped. I plan to pursue medicine as a profession and work as an oncologist, developing and refining new techniques and new treatments to increase survivorship rates in the hope of eventually mitigating cancer's effect on society.

Erik Harstad, Middle Georgia State

University After I was diagnosed with cancer, Children's Healthcare of Atlanta was the primary hospital where I would go to receive treatment as a young boy. As a result, we drove from Columbus, Ga., to Atlanta quite frequently. The route we came took us right next to Atlanta's Hartsfield Jackson International Airport. I was always amazed to see these large pieces of machinery descend out of the big blue sky and land. I looked forward to going to the hospital since I knew I would have a chance to see a few airplanes on final approach into the airport. Ever since that first instance where I saw the planes come out of the sky, flying has been a great part of my life and dreams. My goal is to graduate college with my commercial multi-engine pilot's certificate. I plan to fly as often as possible with any company or organization and to build a safe and professional flying record.

Mitchell Odendahl, Clemson University I plan to follow my childhood fascination of building and creating things and pursue a future as a mechanical engineer. I hope to enter the mountain bike industry after college, combining my passion for downhill mountain bike racing with my fascination for creating. I hope that I have left nearly as much of an impact on the people of Camp Sunshine as the people of Camp Sunshine have left on me. I will never forget the times I had as a camper and hopefully will have the opportunity to return in the future as a counselor. I intend to work hard in my future and give back to camp the way it has given to me.

Mary Kaitlyn Wheeler, Abraham Baldwin College At the age of four, I was diagnosed with osteosarcoma. My tumor was at the top of my left femur, and while my doctor was able to perform a limb salvage surgery, I was left needing the use of a cane to walk. When I started high school, I wanted to earn a letterman jacket. I discovered that I qualified for wheelchair track and field events with my high school's team. During high school, I earned 11 gold medals, a bronze medal and have four team trophies – and a letterman jacket – to show for my efforts. I plan to continue to be an advocate for childhood cancer awareness and help others make the most of every day.

Katelyn Story, Georgia State University I plan to earn my bachelor's degree in Dietetics and Sports Medicine. I then plan to work at Children's Healthcare of Atlanta. I was not only given a second, but a third chance at life and I want to use this life to help others the way that my doctors helped me. As a dietician, I would create meal plans for patients who have specific dietary needs and for children battling obesity. This career is a perfect fit, because since the young age of three, I have battled weight and nutritional problems that were caused by my cancer treatments. My personal experience with these problems gives me an edge that a lot of other dieticians won't have, because I've actually been through it.

Imoter Mngerem, Georgia College and State University As I enter college, my plan is to major in Athletic Training. I have overcome many obstacles, and during my illness and since, I have continued to work out three or four times a week, even while on treatment. My doctors believe that my ability to tolerate chemotherapy with very few side effects as well as a very short stay in the hospital for my bone marrow transplant was due in some part to my body being strong. My oncologists encouraged me to continue to exercise and stay fit. I was an athlete prior to becoming ill, so I knew the importance of being fit. However, I now truly understand the mind/body connection. I hope to someday help others using this same method of exercise and training to overcome medical challenges.

Allyson Wakenigg, University of North Georgia My future plans are finally beginning to happen with going to play college softball at the University of North Georgia. This has always been a long-term goal of mine, even before I had a small bump in the road. Camp Sunshine helped me through this journey, as I always had it to look forward to. I was introduced to others who made me realize I wasn't the only one and that I wasn't alone. My bump in the road didn't hold me back, but pushed me to strive even more towards this goal. With everything I have been through, my desired career path is to work towards a major in nursing, then move forward to be a Physicians Assistant. I got to witness firsthand the duties of being a nurse and I would love to help others the way the nurses helped me.

COMMUNITY PARTNER

Camp Sunshine Benefits from Wendy's Commitment to the Community

Wendy's restaurants are known for their burgers, fries, and of course, Frostys, their signature ice cream. But the company is also known for its commitment to giving back to the community it serves, a philosophy instilled into all its franchisees by the company's founder, Dave Thomas.

And the Wendy's restaurants in Georgia are no exception. Groups of Wendy's franchisees – known as DMAs, or Direct Marketing Associations – have supported Camp Sunshine in various ways over the years.

"Wendy's has always had a philosophy of giving back to the community," says Matt Van Paeppeghem, president of WennMarr Management, which owns 44 Wendy's locations in the metro Atlanta area. "Dave Thomas was always talking about the importance of this. So our work with Camp Sunshine is in keeping with that corporate philosophy."

Support for Camp Sunshine began in 2006, when the group started a fishing tournament at Lake Lanier as a way for members to get together and unwind from the daily grind of running a restaurant. The proceeds from the tournament went to several organizations, including Camp Sunshine.

When the tournament ended, the group came up with a Frosty promotion where customers bought a key fob shaped like a Frosty for a dollar, and then enjoyed free Frostys all summer. At first the proceeds were split between the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption and Camp Sunshine. Eventually, all proceeds went to Camp Sunshine. Last year a card with the Camp Sunshine logo on it replaced the key fob. Four DMAs – Atlanta, Chattanooga, Macon and Savannah – participate in the Frosty promotion to benefit Camp Sunshine.

"A six-ounce cup of ice cream goes a long way," Matt says. "It can enlighten people to the mission of Camp Sunshine, and can put a lot of smiles on the faces of those eating ice cream as well as those who come to camp."

The first year of the promotion raised $30,000 for Camp Sunshine, and support has only grown through the years. In 2016, Wendy's presented Camp Sunshine with a check for over $250,000.

In 2012, a group of from Wendy's visited Camp Sunshine for the first time and returned even more eager to help. A Frosty machine was installed for the campers' enjoyment, and now a group goes to camp one night during both Teen Week and Junior Week to cook dinner for everyone. They serve hamburgers, chicken, hot dogs, side dishes and Frostys. To Matt and his colleagues, this is just another way to support a worthwhile organization.

"I am blown away by how much Camp Sunshine does and the number of volunteers they have," Matt says. "We are fortunate to be involved with such a well-run organization that makes such a big difference in the life of a child, and in the lives of their families." *
